Synopsis	Own this unforgettable SEC versus Big Ten Battle! In front of a record crowd of more than sixty eight thousand, the Auburn Tigers squared off against the Ohio State Buckeyes.
	The Buckeyes scored first and it looked as though they would pull away with an early when quarterback Greg Frey connected with Brian Stablien to give them a 14-3 advantage. That's when it happened.
	Auburn running back Stacy Danley faded out of the backfield on a screen pass play. Ohio State safety Zack Dumas leveled him with a vicious hit. After several anxious minutes Danley finally got up and walked off, pointing at the Ohio State players. "The Hit," as it became known, was the wake up call for the Tigers. After that Auburn played like a different team.
	Quarterback Reggie Slack threw an eleven-yard pass to Greg Taylor to make it a four-point game at the half. The Tigers continued their intense play in the second half as Slack threw for two TDs and ran for another. Auburn's defense held Ohio State scoreless the rest of the game and the Tigers went on to win 31 to 14.
